

explanations in the absence of the extra help that Upjohn provided for them? Patients already spend too much time in our offices. Is the increase in frustration for 99.5 percent of our patients worth this small gain in anxiety recognition for the other 0.5 percent? It isn't in our practice.

Gil L. Solomon, MD
Greater Valley Medical Group
West Hills, Calif

References

1. Mazonson, PD, Mathias SD, Fifer SK, Buesching DP, Malek P, Patrick DL, et al. The mental health patient profile: does it change primary care physicians' practice patterns? J Am Board Fam Pract 1996;9:336-45
2. US Preventive Services Task Force. Clinician's handbook of preventive services. Washington, DC: US Department of Health and Human Services, Public Health Service, Office of Disease Prevention and Promotion, 1994.

Correction

In the credit line of Dr. Carolyn DiGiuseppe's editorial, "Follow-up of Abnormal Results From Lead Screening: Making Evidence-Based Decisions" (Volume 9, Number 6, page 459), is this incorrect statement: "Reprint requests are available." The correct wording should read, "Reprints are not available."

We regret the error.