

for molecular diagnostics of Zika virus: Experiences from an international EQA Programme, 2016–2018. Viruses 2018;10(9).pii: E491.

doi: 10.3122/jabfm.2019.02.180340

Response: Re: The Complex Interpretation and Management of Zika Virus Test Results

To the Editor: Thank you to Drs Yasril and Wiwanitkit for raising these additional points regarding our article. We agree that clinicians should be aware of all possible sources of error in testing for Zika virus.

Kenneth W. Lin, MD, MPH,
Department of Family Medicine, Georgetown University Medical Center

John D. Kraemer, JD, MPH,
Department of Health Systems Administration,
Georgetown University
Rachael Piltch-Loeb, MSPH,
New York University College of Global Public Health, and Michael A. Stoto, PhD,
Department of Health Systems Administration,
Georgetown University, Washington, DC

doi: 10.3122/jabfm.2019.02.180348

The above letter was referred to the author of the article in question, who offers the following reply.