Drug Interactions: Catecholamine-depleting drugs may have additive effects when given with SECTRAL. Diuretics, beta-blockers, digitalis, and other myocardial depressants (including some OTC cold remedies) may also be synergistic. Patients receiving SECTRAL should be observed for additive depression of myocardial function.

NURSING CONSIDERATIONS: Nursing or lactation is not recommended. When breastfeeding mothers are using SECTRAL, the drug may appear in breast milk. The infant may receive less than 1% of the maternal dose. Infants of mothers who received SECTRAL during the postpartum period have had transient decreases in cardiovascular and cardiac indexes, as well as decreases in respiratory rate and oxygen saturation.

Potential Adverse Effects: Certain adverse effects noted above have been reported with other beta-blockers and should be considered as potential adverse effects of SECTRAL.

Toxicity: Fatal cardiac failure may occur, especially as a result of myocardial depression. The signs and symptoms of toxicity usually are reversible if therapy is discontinued promptly.

Care of the Patient: Provide nursing care as needed. Support heart rate, blood pressure, and cardiac function. Cardiac monitoring and other appropriate supportive care should be provided until the signs and symptoms of toxicity are resolved.
